See נוֹמָד and cp. words there referred to. The change of Gk. nomos to נִימוּס in Hebrew is due to dissimilation. According to a well-known linguistic law of the Hebrew language if o or u sounds follow each other in two neighboring syllables, the first is generally changed into i. cp. e.g. חִיצוֹן (= outer, exterior), which derives from חוּץ (= out of, outside), and חִיכוֹן (= middle, central), which comes from תּוֹךְ (= in the midst of); see חִיצוֹן and חִיכוֹן. According to my opinion the word נִימוֹס also owes its form to the same law of dissimilation. The change of Gk. nomos to נִימוֹס is very important because it proves that this law (the law of Philippi) continued to be valid during the period of the Mishnah and Talmud, and was applied even to words of foreign origin. cp. MH בִּימוֹס (= pedestal), which was dissimilated from Gk. bomos (= altar), קִינוֹף (= frame of canopy for a mosquito net), dissimilated from Gk. konopeion (= a bed with mosquito curtains), קִיתוֹן (= jug, cup), dissimilated from Gk. kothon (= Laconian drinking vessel).] Derivative: נִימוֹסִי.

ס

ס The fifteenth letter of the Hebrew alphabet. The name of the letter, 'Samekh', prob. derives from סמך and lit. means 'support, fulcrum'; so called in allusion to its ancient Heb. form. In PBH it has the numerical value of sixty. When (as in most cases) it is an independent sibilant (beside שׂ and שׁ), its Arab. correspondence is s; cp. e.g. אָסַר and Arab. 'asara (= he bound, tied). Sometimes, however, it is secondary standing for orig. שׁ, in which case its Arab. equivalent is sh; cp. e.g. Heb. סְתָו and Arab. shitā' (= winter). This change of שׁ to ס is quite frequent in NH and in Aram.; in Syriac the שׁ has been replaced entirely by ס. ס alternates also with ז (see the introductory article to letter ז). It often becomes צ, esp. in the vicinity of ח or emphatic sounds; cp. e.g. סחן I (= to be strong), with Arab. ḥaṣuna (= was strong); קסם (= to practice divination), with Syr. קָצַם (= he practiced divination); פֶּסַח (= Passover) with Syr. פְּצָחָא (of s.m.); עקץ (= to sting, prick) with Syr. עָקַס (= it stung, it pricked). In some rare cases ס represents orig. שׂ; cp. סְרִיוֹן, a secondary form of שִׁרְיוֹן (= coat of arms, armor); Heb. נָסַג, BAram., Aram. and Syr. כְּנַשׁ (= he gathered, collected).

צ

צ The eighteenth letter of the Heb. alphabet. The name of the letter, 'tzadeh' or 'tzade' (צָדֵי), means lit. 'fishing hook' and prob. so called in allusion to the ancient form of this letter. It is also called צַדִּיק, 'tzaddik', prob. formed from צָדֵי and ק, the letter following it in the Heb. alphabet, under the influence of the word צַדִּיק. צ has a final form, ץ. In PBH צ has the numerical value of ninety and ץ has the numerical value of nine hundred. Heb. צ comprises three orig. different sounds. 1 It corresponds to Aram.-Syr. צ, Ugar. ṣ, Arab ṣ, OSArab. צ, Ethiop. ṣ, Akka. ṣ. cp. e.g. Heb. אֶצְבַּע, Aram. אֶצְבָּע, אֶצְבְּעָא, Ugar. iṣb, Syr. אֶצְבְּעָא, Arab. iṣbaʿ, OSArab. אצבע (as a measure), Ethiop. ʾaṣbāʿt, Akka. ṣubū, iṣbiṭṭu (= finger). 2 צ also corresponds to Aram.-Syr. ט, Ugar. ẓ, Arab. ẓ, OSArab. ט. cp. e.g. Heb. צֵל, Aram. טְלָלָא, Ugar. ẓl, Arab. ẓill, Syr. טְלָלָא (= shadow, shade). 3 צ also corresponds to Aram. ע (sometimes ק), Syr. ע, Arab. ḍ, OSArab. צ, Ethiop. ḍ, Akka. ṣ. cp. e.g. Heb. יָצָא (= he went out), Aram. and Syr. יעא (= to go forth, bloom), Arab. waḍuʾa (= was or became beautiful, neat or clean). OSArab. וצא (= to go out). Sometimes in this case the Aram. equivalent is צ (see צמד and צרך). If Aram.-Syr. ע, as the regular equivalent of Heb. צ (see above), is preceded or followed by another guttural, it is usually dissimilated into א. cp. e.g. Heb. עֵץ and Aram. אָע, for עָע (= wood); Heb. צֵלָע and Syr. אֶלְעָא, for עֶלְעָא (= rib), Syr. אַעְפָּא, for עַעְפָּא (= double), and base יצעף, whence also Heb. צָעִיף (= veil). צ alternates with ז and ס (see the introductory entries to these letters). It also alternates with שׂ. cp. שׂחק — a collateral form of צחק (= to laugh). The change of צ to ג in JAram.-Syr. גְּחַךְ (= he laughed) is due to dissimilation. For the rare interchangeability of צ and ק see אֶרֶץ, צאן, מחץ, עץ and צֶמֶר.

צֵאָה f.n. excrement, dung, filth. [Related to JAram.-Syr. צֵאָה (= dirty), Syr. צאי (= was dirty), Arab. waṣiʾa (= was dirty), Ethiop. ṣēʾa (= stank), Akka. zū, ṣū (= filth). ר

ר The twentieth letter of the Heb. alphabet. The name of the letter, רֵישׁ ('resh'), is Aram., and lit. means 'head'; so called in allusion to the ancient form of this letter. In PBH it has the numerical value of two hundred. ר alternates with ל and נ (see the introductory entries to these letters). ר often serves for the dissimilation of the reduplication of a consonant. So, e.g., דַּרְמֶשֶׂק is a dissimilated form of דַּמֶּשֶׂק (= Damascus). In this way many bases and words have been enlarged into quadriliterals; cp. e.g. BAram. פַּרְסָא (= chair), which is prob. a loan word from Akka. kussu (= chair, throne), whence prob. also Heb. כִּסֵּא; base כרסם (= to chew, gnaw, devour), dissimilated from כסם (= to shear, clip); שַׁרְבִּיט (= scepter), enlarged from שֵׁבֶט (of s.m.); סָרְעָפָה (= branch), enlarged from סָעָפָה (of s.m.); שַׂרְעַפִּים (= thoughts), enlarged from שַׂעַפִּים (of s.m.). Sometimes ר is assimilated to the following consonant; so כִּרְכַּר becomes כִּבַּר (see כִּכַּר I, כִּכַּר II).

ר־ PBH suff. forming nomina opificum. [From the ending of סַנְדְּלָר (= sandal maker), from Gk. sandalarios. Hence ־ר properly corresponds to Gk. suff. -arios, L. -ārius. Already in the time of the Talmud this ending was used as a suff. to form the noun חֲלִיטָר (= pastry maker) from חֲלִיטָה (= pastry). cp. סַמַרְטוּטָר.]

שׁ

שׁ The twenty-first letter of the Heb. alphabet. The name of the letter 'shin' is prob. derived from שֵׁן (= tooth), and so called in allusion to the ancient form of this letter. In PBH it has the numerical value of three hundred. The letter שׁ marks two different sounds: שׂ ('sin') and שׁ ('shin'). Heb. שׁ corresponds to Aram. שׁ and ס, Syr. ס, Ugar. sh, Arab. sh, Ethiop. sh, Akka. sh. cp. e.g. Heb. נָשָׂא, BAram. נְשָׂא, Aram. נְסָא (= he lifted, took, carried), Ugar. nsh (= to lift), Arab. nasha'a (= he rose, was high, grew up), Ethiop. nash'a (= he lifted; he transferred), Syr. מַסְאָתָא (= scales), Akka. nashū (= to lift; to carry). There are exceptions to the rule according to which Arab. sh corresponds to Heb. שׁ and vice versa. These exceptions are due mainly to assimilation, partly also to the circumstance that Heb. שׁ sometimes stands for orig. ס (see שִׂכֶּךָ, שִׂתֵּם, שִׂבֵּר). In earlier Aram. and in BAram. שׁ is generally preserved, but many words that have שׁ in Biblical Heb. are regularly spelled in MH with ס. Heb. שׁ corresponds to Aram.–Syr. שׁ, Ugar. sh, Arab. s, Ethiop. sh, Akka. sh. cp. e.g. Heb. שָׁלוֹם, Aram.–Syr. שְׁלָם, שְׁלָמָא, Ugar. shlm, Arab. salām, Akka. shalāmu, shulmu (= peace). The s in Arab. shams (= sun) is due to dissimilation (see שֶׁמֶשׁ). In many cases Heb. שׁ corresponds to Aram.–Syr. ת, Arab. th, Ethiop. s. cp. e.g. Heb. שָׁלֹשׁ, Aram.–Syr. תְּלָת, Arab. thalāth, Ethiop. shalās (= three). As shown above, the Akka. equivalent of Heb. שׁ is sh. However, in some rare cases Heb. שׁ corresponds to Akka. s (as in sābu, 'to draw water', which corresponds to שׁאב). Akka. sh may become l before a dental. cp. e.g. ḫamishtu and ḫamiltu (= five; see חמשׁ), lubushtu and lubultu (= dress; see לבשׁ); mashtītu and maltītu (= drink; see שׁתה).

שׁ, שָׁ, שֶׁ, שִׁ pron. particle meaning 'who', 'whom', 'which', 'what', 'that', whence synonymous with אֲשֶׁר (q.v.). [Related to, or derived from, Phoen. אש and שׁ. Related also to OAram. שׁ, Akka. sha, earlier also shu (= he who; one who). cp. שְׁדִין (= שֶׁדִּי). cp. also the first element in סָרִיס.]

[Aram. שְׁאֵב (= he drew, he attracted), Ugar. sh'b, Akka. sa'ābu, sābu (= to draw water), Arab. sa'aba (= he drank).] — Qal שָׁאַב tr. v. 1 he drew (water); 2 he sucked in, absorbed, attracted; 3 NH he pumped. — Niph. נִשְׁאַב 1 MH was drawn (said of water); 2 NH was absorbed, was attracted; 3 NH was pumped. — Pi. שִׁאֵב 1 MH he drew (water); 2 NH he pumped. — Nith. נִשְׁתָּאֵב NH was drawn to the end, was exhausted. [A secondary form of שׁעה.] — Hith. הִשְׁתָּאָה he gazed in wonder (a hapax legomenon in the Bible, occurring Gen. 24:21 in the form of the part. מִשְׁתָּאֵה). [Targum Onkelos renders this word by שָׁהֵי בָהּ מִסְתַּכֵּל, the Septuagint by katemanthanen (= he took great notice of her), and the Vulgate by contemplabatur (= he looked at her attentively). Some scholars see in מִשְׁתָּאֵה the Hith. of שׁאה I and explain it in the sense of 'he stood empty of thoughts', i.e. he stood in a state of unconscious. This is a far-fetched derivation indeed, and the etymology given supra is surely to be preferred to it in every respect.] Derivative: הִשְׁתָּאוּת.

The reading הַשׁוֹאֵבָה (i.e. the active part.) would hardly be appropriate in the context, which deals with water drawn and not with something that 'draws'.]

Still others derive it from base appearing in Aram. שְׁדָא (= he hurled, threw), and translate שַׁדַּי by 'the hurler of the arrows of lightning and thunder'. Several scholars refer to Arab. sadā (= he stretched out his hand), saddā (= he heaped benefits; he reconciled persons at enmity with each other), and render שַׁדַּי by 'Dispenser of benefits', resp. 'Protector of peace'. In this case the form שַׁדַּי could be most easily explained as a פַּעָל-form (whence also סַלָּח, 'Forgiver'). Our Sages explain שַׁדַּי as שַׁ דַּי (= whose divinity suffices for every creature); see שׁם (= שׂם) and דַּי. manuscripts and in print, the pref. was separated from the noun thus becoming a preposition with the meaning: 1 'belonging to, of', hence serving as the mark of the genitive (e.g. שֶׁל הַבַּיִת, 'of the house'), and corresponding to It. di, Sp. and Fren. de, Eng. of, etc.; 2 'made of, consisting of' (e.g. שֶׁל זָהָב, 'made of gold, of gold'). Through the addition of the pron. suffix שֶׁל becomes the possessive pronoun, hence שֶׁלִּי (= my, mine), שֶׁלְּךָ (= thy, thine, your, yours), sing. שֶׁלּוֹ (= his), שֶׁלָּהּ (= her, hers), שֶׁלָּנוּ (= our or ours), שֶׁלָּכֶם (= your or yours — m. pl.), שֶׁלָּכֶן (= your or yours — f. pl.). Prob. derived from שׁמם (= to be poisonous or venomous) — whence Aram. סַם, Arab. samm (= poison) — and lit. meaning 'a poisonous (lizard)'. This etymology gains in probability in that Arab. sāmm denotes a kind of poisonous snake and is properly the act. part. of samma (= to poison), used as a noun. If this etymology is correct, the meaning of שְׁמָמִית cannot be gecko — as usually assumed — because the gecko is a harmless kind of lizard.]

Several scholars see in שמש a shortened form of base שמשם (= to be quick, be swift, run), whence also Arab. samsama (= he ran, was active, was busy, was industrious), sumsum, susmān (= the red ant), Aram. שִׁמְשָׁנָא, whence through metathesis שִׁשְׁמָנָא (= ant; lit.: 'the swift or nimble insect'). The noun שֶׁמֶשׁ (= sun), prob. also derives from base שמש in the above sense and lit. denotes 'the running or wandering celestial body', or is perhaps so called in allusion to its quivering beams. Other scholars, on the contrary, see in שֶׁמֶשׁ a verb denominated from שֶׁמֶשׁ (= sun); according to them שמש would have meant orig. 'to serve (or worship) the sun', whence, through sense enlargement, would have developed the meaning 'to serve (in general)'. Still others see in שמש a loan word from Egypt. shmsy (= to follow, serve), whence shmśw, Coptic shemshe (= servant).] — Pi. שִׁמֵּשׁ PBH 1 he served, attended; 2 he officiated, functioned; 3 he ministered, waited upon; 4 he played a role; 5 he performed marital duty. — Pu. שֻׁמַּשׁ was used. — Hith. הִשְׁתַּמֵּשׁ 1 PBH he made use of, availed himself of, exploited; 2 NH became used. ת

ת The twenty-second letter of the Heb. alphabet. The name of the letter, תָּו or תָּיו ('Tav', also 'Taw'), means 'sign', 'mark'; so called in allusion to the ancient form of this letter. In PBH it has the numerical value of four hundred. In the Sem. languages ת alternates with ד, ט and שׁ (see the introductory entries to these letters). ת often appears as the first radical in secondary bases enlarged from primary ones; see יתאב, תחה, תחל, possibly also תהל (supposed to be the base of תְּהִלָּה). The ת in these cases is either traceable to the ת of the conjugation הִתְפַּעֵל, or is originally identical with the subst. pref. תּ־ (see תַּ־, תִּ־, תּוֹ־). See תבע.

תּ־ see pref. תַּ־.

תַּ־, תִּ־, תּוֹ־, תְּ־ subst. pref. Nouns with prefixed ת generally serve: 1 as verbal nouns of the Qal, usually strengthening the basic meaning of the verb; 2 in most cases, esp. in the form 'taqtīl', as verbal nouns of the Pi'ēl, corresponding to Arab. 'taqtīl', verbal n. of the second (intensive) conjugation; see תַּשְׁמִישׁ; 3 However, since in Hebrew the intensive conjugation (Pi'ēl) and the causative conjugation (Hiph'īl) are closely related in sense (e.g. the Pi'ēl often has a causative meaning, which is the primary sense of the Hiph'īl), and because the form 'taqtīl' is very similar to the Hiph'īl (perf. הִפְעִיל, imperf. יַפְעִיל), therefore it often occurs that 'taqtīl' is the verbal noun form for verbs in the Hiph'īl; 4 Quite rarely verbal nouns with pref. תּ־ are related to the Niph'āl or the Hithpa'ēl. תַּ־ is the mostly used prefix forming verbal nouns in Hebrew. It is related to Aram-Syr. תַּ־, תִּ־, Arab. ta-, ti-, Ethiop. ta-, ti-, Akka. ta. In all Sem. languages the prefixes מ־ and תּ־ are often interchangeable. cp. e.g. תַּרְבִּית and מַרְבִּית (= interest, profit), תּוֹצָא and מוֹצָא (= outgoing), תְּשׁוּבָה (= return), and מְשׁוּבָה (= backsliding), תַּאֲוָה and מַאֲוַיִּים (= desire), תַּחֲלוּאִים and מַחֲלוּיִים (= sickness), תִּירוֹשׁ and Aram. מֵירְתָא, Syr. מְאִירְתָא (= must, new wine), Syr. תַּרְנִיתָא and מַרְנִיתָא (= meditation), Arab. tiqwāl and miqwāl (= chatterer, babbler), tifāq and mifāq (= first appearance). cp. pref. מ־.

תִּ־ form of pref. תַּ־ (q.v.).

־תּ (after gutturals ־תַ) f. subst. & adj. suff. cp. e.g. דֶּלֶת (= door), קֶשֶׁת (= bow), שֶׁבֶת (= to sit), לֶדֶת (= to bear), דַּעַת (= to know), גְּבֶרֶת (= mistress, lady), נְחֹשֶׁת (= copper), שׁוֹמֶרֶת (= watching). It is esp. common in participles and infinitives: שׁוֹמֶרֶת is more frequent than שׁוֹמְרָה, לֶדֶת than לֶדָה. [This suff. developed from t which had perhaps orig. demonstrative force. It appears in the Sem. languages in two forms: 1 as t, whence: Heb. ־ת, as in בַּת (= daughter), שְׁתַּיִם (= two), ־תּ in אוֹהֶבֶת (= loving), יוֹשֶׁבֶת (= sitting), etc.; t appears also in Arabic in a few nouns, as in bint (= daughter), 'uḫt (= sister), and in thintai (= two) (f.); in Ethiop. bent (= pupil of the eye), 'eḫt (= sister), walat (= daughter), tamart (= palm tree), negesht (= queen; f. of negūsh, 'king'); in Akka. bintu (= daughter), shattu (= year), talīmtu (= sister), batūltu (= virgin), ti'āmtu (= sea); and prob. in the Aram. nouns בַּת (= daughter), שַׁתָּא (= year). 2 as -at, which became ־ָה (orig. only in pause), whence Heb. ־ָה, as in סוּסָה (= mare; from סוּס, 'horse'); see first suff. ־ָה.]

תַּבְרֹגֶת f.n. NH screw thread. [Verbal n. of בָּרַג (= he screwed; see ברג), from the transitive form 'taqtulat'. A great number of the transitive 'taqtulat' nouns belongs to the vocabulary of NH. Like תַּבְרֹגֶת, most of them are connected with the Qal. The following list of words shows how the form 'taqtulat' was and is still used to enrich the NH vocabulary: תַּגְבֶּרֶת (= rise, increase; reinforcement), תַּגְהֶצֶת (= smartness, spick-and-span) – from the Qal; תַּגְרֶלֶת (= raffle, lottery), from the Hiph.; תַּדְגֶּרֶת (= incubation), תַּדְחֹקֶת (= congestion, overcrowding), תַּזְכֶּרֶת (= memorandum, reminder), תַּזְמֹרֶת (= orchestra), תַּחְזֹרֶת (= reconstruction), תַּחְמֹצֶת (= oxide) — beginning with תַּדְגֶּרֶת, all the nouns are derived from the Qal; תַּחְמֹשֶׁת (= arming, armament), from the Pi'ēl; תַּחְפֹּשֶׁת (= disguise), and תַּכְתֹּבֶת (= correspondence) — both from the Hith-pa'ēl; תַּמּוֹגֶת (= mixture) — from the Qal; תַּנְעֵמֶת (= melodics) — from the Hiph'īl; תַּסְבֹּכֶת (= complexity), תַּסְבֹּלֶת (= load-carrying capacity) — both from the Qal; תַּסְמֹנֶת (= syndrome) — from the Pi'ēl; תַּסְקֹרֶת (= review), תַּסְרֹקֶת (= hairdressing) — both from the Qal; תַּפּוֹרֶת (= loose cargo), תַּפְלֹגֶת (= timing) — both from the Pi'ēl; תַּפְרֹסֶת (= distribution), תַּפְרֹשֶׁת (= sails), תַּפְתֹּלֶת (= conglomerate), תַּצְרֹכֶת (= consumption) — beginning with תַּפְרֹסֶת all the nouns are derived from the Qal; תַּצְרֻפָה (= synthesis), תַּקְבֻּלֶת (= parallelism) — both from the Pi'ēl; תַּקְרֹנֶת (= radiation), תַּקְשֹׁטֶת (= decoration, embellishment), תַּקְשֹׁרֶת (= communication) — all the three nouns from the Qal; תַּרְבֹּכֶת (= confusion; mixture, ragout) — from the Hiph'īl; תַּרְגֹּלֶת (= drill, maneuver), תַּרְכֹּבֶת (= composition, compound) — both from the Hiph'īl; תַּרְכֻּזֶת (= concentration) — from the Pi'ēl; תַּרְשֹׁמֶת (= details, entry in bookkeeping), תַּשְׁבֹּצֶת (= applique), תַּשְׁרֹרֶת (= interlacing), תַּשְׁלֹבֶת (= joining, combining, attaching) — all the four nouns from the Qal; תַּשְׁקֻפָה (= perspective) — from the Hiph'īl; תִּשְׁרֹקֶת (= a long-whistling sound) — from the Qal. Those who use the nominal forms beginning with תַּ (i.e. any of the forms 'taqtil', 'taqtūl', 'taqtulat') to coin NH words, should bear in mind that these serve to form verbal nouns, which for this very reason can have only an abstract sense and can by no means be used to form concrete nouns. Therefore e.g. among the verbal nouns here enumerated the word תַּפְרֹשֶׁת has been erroneously chosen to denote 'sails'; nor is it correct to use the form תַּפְרֹזֶת in the sense 'loose cargo'. Similarly תַּרְכֹּבֶת can have the meaning 'composition', but should not be used in the sense of 'compound', and תַּרְבֹּכֶת can well mean 'confusion', but should not have been given the meaning 'ragout'. For the same reason it is surely incorrect to render תַּשְׁחֹרֶת by 'reconnoitering troop', as several commentators and lexicographers do.]

תִּירָס m.n. maize, corn. [In the Bible תִּירָס is the name of one of the sons of Japhet. Far and forced is the way in which this proper name came to denote 'maize', or 'corn'. The Talmud renders תִּירָס by בית תרייקי. In the period of the Haskalah (1750–1880) it became customary to identify תרייקי — merely because of the similarity in sound between תרייקי and תּוּרְקִיָּה — with Turkey. Furthermore, since maize is called in many languages 'Turkish wheat' (cp. e.g. Ger. türkischer Weizen — whence Yiddish Terkische weiz — It. granturco, Hungarian törökbúza, etc.), תִּירָס was and is still used to denote the maize in Hebrew. The identification of תִּירָס with maize on the basis of the above reasoning cannot be accepted. Before all בית תרייקי (see supra) cannot be identical with Turkey, because the Babylonian Talmud was concluded about the end of the fifth century and the Talmud Yerushalmi, in which תִּירָס is rendered by תרקא, was concluded even earlier, whereas the Turks appear in history for the first time in the thirteenth century. Furthermore, the Biblical name generally used for Turkey is תּוֹגַרְמָה (the modern name is טוּרְקִיָּה). In consideration of all this I suggest to call the maize in Hebrew either חִטַּת־טוּרְקִיָּה or חִטַּת־תּוֹגַרְמָה, i.e. 'Turkish wheat', which are a simple loan translation of Ger. türkischer Weizen, etc.]

תַּיְשָׁנוּת f.n. NH (also תַּיְשָׁנוּת) capriciousness. [Loan translation of Fren. caprice (= a whim). This translation is based on the erroneous supposition that Fren. caprice derives from L. caper (= he-goat), while in reality it derives from It. capriccio (= a shiver, sudden start, a whim), which is prob. compounded of capo (= head) and riccio, from L. ēricius (= hedgehog).
